13th October

A spiritual basis for sustainable living

Drawing on a variety of spiritual traditions we will explore why it is essential to cultivate gratitude and appreciation, how we can be present to what is, and how to find hope by remembering who we really are. Developing the perspective of 'deep time' we can find encouragement to sense our way forward, to empower and enliven our response to the global crises of our age. At the end of the day we will look at how we each feel able to contribute to the healing of our world, as we proceed in a spirit of radical trust.

With Alex Wildwood

Alex Wildwood trained in body-based psychotherapy and in explorations of our 'deep ecology' with Buddhist scholar and activist Joanna Macy (www.workthatreconnects.org). His latest book (written with Jo Farrow) is 'Universe as Revelation' (Pronoun Press 2013).

11th November

Digging the Dirt; an hour-long play with Gill Nathanson & Bill Buffery of the multi-story theatre company. The play focuses on issues of freedom of speech, raising many issues of concern to Friends. Official poster will follow.
